APA

Format + Citation Style = APA

APA stands for American Psychological Association, which publishes The Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, currently in the 6th edition. While APA style is used mostly in the social and behavioral sciences, it’s the default standard at Kaplan.

APA generally refers to two things: format (or the way a paper looks) and citation style (or the way a writer acknowledges the use of outside resources).

The APA web site contains helpful tutorials and a style blog. If you cannot find the information you need within the Writing Center, try the APA Style Blog. You’ll probably find the information you need!

This workshop will focus on format, including general paper format and citations.
General Manuscript Guidelines

1. Title page
2. Discussion
3. Reference list if research used

Every APA paper has two parts -- a title page and discussion pages. If research sources are used, the paper must also contain a reference list.

The title page identifies the names of the composition, writer, and university. It also includes a header with title and page number.

The discussion is the body of the paper.

A reference list identifies all sources cited in the discussion and appears on a separate page at the end.
General Manuscript Guidelines

Why is formatting important? It’s really quite simple: writers want to make reading easy for their readers. These general guidelines, which apply to all three parts of an APA paper, make reading easy.

1. Headers
2. One-inch margins
3. Standard 12-point font
4. Double-spacing
5. Title, discussion, and reference list pages

A header appears at the top of every page to identify the paper’s title and page number. In a moment, we will look at APA headers.

Margins of one inch on all four sides provide enough white space for reading and printing. Microsoft Word generally is pre-set for these margins, so you do not have to adjust them (unless you have an old version of the program).

Research has shown that left-aligned text standard font in 12-point size is generally the easiest to read. Times New Roman and Arial are standard fonts and often preferred or required by an assignment.

To double-space text correctly throughout your composition, go to the Paragraph menu and select Double under Line Spacing. Do this when you create the document, as creating format is much easier before word-processing than it is after completing your work.

The title, discussion, and reference pages follow certain guidelines as explained in following slides.
Title Page

- Header: Running head: TITLE OF COMPOSITION on the left and the page number on the right
- Use MS Word’s “Header” feature to insert header
- From top of page, click “Enter” about 7 times and type title of paper, your name, and school affiliation

Just above the middle of the page, word-process the composition title (follow standard capitalization rules), the author’s name, and the university name.

If a professor asks you to add information, for example the name of the course, make sure you follow those directions even if they contradict APA standard style.
Abstract

- Abstract used only if required
- Separate page between title page and discussion
- Brief summary of essential information in one or two paragraphs
- Abstract as title centered on first line in plain font
- No paragraph indentation
Discussion

• “Running head:” removed from header

• Essay title in header in ALL CAPS

• Composition title centered on the first discussion page

• Double-spacing with no extra spaces
Headings and Subheadings

Use only if required by professor or assignment directions!

- Section labels in long papers like graduate theses
- APA uses 5 levels
  - Level 1: Centered, Boldface, Major Words Start with Capital Letters
  - Level 2: Far Left, Boldface, Major Words Start with Capital Letters
  - Level 3: Indented, boldface, only first letter of first word capitalized, ends in period.
  - Level 4: Indented, boldface, italicized, only first letter of first word capitalized, ends in period.
  - Level 5: Indented, italicized, only first letter of first word capitalized, ends in period.
In-Text Citations

- Period after the citation when citation ends sentence (not before and not before and after)

  APA requires writers to consult resources carefully (Clements, 2011).

In-text Citations

Period after citation when citation ends sentence (not before and not before and after)

APA requires writers to consult resources carefully (Clements, 2011).

There are two different kinds of citations: those found in the discussion or body of the paper (called in-text citations) and those in the reference list at the end of the paper. The in-text citation is a short version that corresponds to the long or complete citation in the reference list.
In-Text Citations

• URL not an in-text citation

  Incorrect: While APA can be confusing, with more experience, the process gets easier (http://apaeasy.net).

  Correct: While APA can be confusing at first, with more experience, the process gets easier (Clements, 2011).

The use of a URL as a citation can confuse the reader. If you remember that the purpose of a citation is to name the author or title of the referenced work, you will see that a URL cannot serve that purpose. APA citation is always a name/date system. A URL shows neither.

Use of a URL as a citation is one of those things that can drive professors crazy. You will want to remember that no citation is ever a URL.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>In-Text Citations</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>• Quotation of 40 words or more in block format</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- Quotation marks removed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- Quotation indented additional half-inch from left</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- Period at the end of quotation, not after the citation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>- Long quotations used sparingly, if at all.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Please remember that long quotations of this kind can actually detract from your writing and puzzle the reader, who will wonder what is important in the quotation. In general, it’s advisable to avoid block quotations, especially in short papers of ten pages or fewer.
FDR was a strong president in tough times, but what many don’t realize is the impact his wife, Eleanor, had on his decision making. Much was written about the fact that FDR broke Herbert Hoover’s written-questions-only rule for White House press conferences. He did that two days after Eleanor, in the first of a series of first-lady news conferences, fielded unwritten questions from female reporters. (Lord, 2003, p.12)

Reference List

- For book or article title, first letter of first word, proper nouns and proper adjectives, and first word after colon capitalized

- For newspaper or journal title, first and all important words capitalized (standard capitalization).

Capitalization and punctuation of titles in reference citations are quite unusual, as shown in this slide and as explained in the KUWC tutorial Common Citations in APA. Please also listen to the podcast, Reference Page Capitalization Rules, at the following link: https://kucampus.kaplan.edu/MyStudies/AcademicSupportCenter/WritingCenter/EffectiveWritingPodcast.aspx

Please note that a journal URL is used only if it takes the reader to the homepage of the journal; otherwise, there will be no URL for a journal article.
Reference List

• Separate page titled References
• Alphabetical order by authors’ last names (or titles if there are no authors)
• Double-spacing without extra lines between citations
• Hanging indents
• Citations varied according to source type
• Two or more works by the same author in publication order

A hanging indent is used to make each citation stand out. The first line of each citation is aligned left while the second and following lines are indented one-half inch. Do not try to do this with the Enter and Spacebar keys. Let Microsoft Word create the hanging indent through the Paragraph menu. Under Indentation and Special, choose Hanging. The program will then create the correct format.

The content of a citation is determined by its type. A journal article and a blog post, for example, have slightly different requirements. What’s important to remember, however, that citation is always a name/date process, so the writer always looks for the same kinds of information: who (author), when (publication date), what (title), and where (means of access).
Reference List Example

This slide shows an example of a reference list.

Please note alphabetical order by author (or title if there is no author) and the hanging indentation.

All About APA – A Special Writing Centers Week Workshop Series

Join the KUWC for three, live workshops designed to help you learn all about APA! Attend all three live workshops, but if you must miss one, the recorded archive will be posted after the workshop.

- APA Formatting – 2/15 @ 8:30 pm ET
- APA Basics – 2/17 @ 7 pm ET
- APA Advanced – 2/18 @ 2 pm ET
Connect with the KUWC’s public webpage. You can actually Google and find this page. This is also a great way for you to stay connected to the KUWC through Facebook and Twitter. Many of our resources are here as well.
Come visit the Academic Support Center. We can be found under the My Studies tab, then under Academic Support Center.
On the main Academic Support Center page, you will see the links to each center’s services and resources. For the Writing Center, these include Live Tutoring, Paper Review Service, the Writing Reference Library, Citation Guidelines, Workshops, English Language Learner, and Fundamental writing help. Notice, you can access the Kaplan Guide to Successful Writing on the right hand side in both print and audio form.
Writing Center

The best time to do a paper review in the Kaplan University Writing Center is after you have written your first draft. When you come to us early, we can help you the most by helping you with the structure of your paper. Many students send papers at the last minute because they want us to simply proofread their paper. However, KUWC writing tutors do not simply proofread the paper for you; we want to help you learn to write and proofread your own papers. You can submit a first draft, and then submit a later draft if you need further help on an assignment.

If you need help before you write the first draft, you can use live tutoring. During live tutoring, you can ask questions and brainstorm with a tutor. Live tutors can help you with other stages in the paper writing process as well.
